Ms. Hyde was nominated by President Barack Obama and confirmed by the U.S. Senate in November 2009 as Administrator of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), a public health agency within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). The agency’s mission is to reduce the impact of substance abuse and mental illness on America’s communities.

Ms. Hyde is an attorney and comes to SAMHSA with more than 35 years of experience in management and consulting for public health care and human services agencies. She has served as a state mental health director, state human services director, city housing and human services director, as well as CEO of a private, nonprofit managed behavioral health care firm. In 2003 Ms. Hyde was appointed cabinet secretary of the New Mexico Human Services Department by Governor Bill Richardson, where she worked effectively to provide greater access to quality health services for everyone.

Ms. Hyde is a member of or has served as a consultant to many national organizations, including the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, the ACMHA: The College for Behavioral Health Leadership, the President’s New Freedom Commission on Mental Health, and the U.S. Department of Justice. She has been recognized by many groups, including the American Medical Association, the National Governors Association, and the Seattle Management Association, for her creativity and leadership in policy and program development and organizational management issues. Ms. Hyde has received special acknowledgment for her ability to build teams, develop coalitions and consensus, develop strategic plans, and form the basis for action and achieve identified goals in a constantly changing environment.

She received her J.D. from the University of Michigan Law School (1976) and her B.A. from Southwest Missouri State University (1972).
Ms. Enomoto was appointed in August 2011 as Principal Deputy Administrator, SAMHSA, HHS. In this capacity, she shares responsibility with the Administrator to provide executive direction and policy leadership for an agency with more than 500 employees and a fiscal year budget of approximately $3.5 billion.

Ms. Enomoto brings 13 years of experience in the behavioral health field. She previously held the positions of Director of SAMHSA’s Office of Policy, Planning and Innovation and Principal Senior Advisor to the Administrator. In these roles, she coordinated activities on behalf of the Administrator across the full spectrum of mental health and substance abuse policy issues, SAMHSA’s grant and contracts portfolio, process improvement, and interagency/intersector collaborations. Ms. Enomoto also served as SAMHSA Acting Deputy Administrator between 2008 and 2009. Among her accomplishments, she developed an employee-led People First team to encourage vertical and horizontal communication and collaboration and to create an environment that promotes a learning organization across a multigenerational, diverse, and engaged workforce. Ms. Enomoto began her tenure at SAMHSA in 1998 as a Presidential Management Fellow and Public Health Advisor.

Ms. Enomoto’s background is in clinical psychology. She received her bachelor’s and master’s degrees from the University of California, Los Angeles, and is a 2011 graduate of Harvard University’s Kennedy School of Senior Managers in Government Program.
Dr. Huang is a licensed clinical-community psychologist and a Senior Advisor in the Administrator’s Office of Policy, Planning and Innovation at SAMHSA, HHS. In this position, she provides leadership on national policy for mental health and substance use issues for children, adolescents, and families and leads the Administrator’s strategic initiative on Trauma and Justice. Dr. Huang is also Director of SAMHSA’s Office of Behavioral Health Equity, which was legislated by the Affordable Care Act. In 2009 she completed a 6-month leadership exchange at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), where she was the Senior Advisor on Mental Health.

For the past 25 years, Dr. Huang has worked at the interface of practice, research, and policy. She has assumed multiple leadership roles dedicated to improving the lives of children, families, and communities and has been a community mental health practitioner, a faculty member at the University of California, Berkeley, and Georgetown University, and a research director at the American Institutes for Research. Dr. Huang has worked with states and communities to build systems of care for children with serious emotional and behavioral disorders. She has developed programs for underserved and culturally and linguistically diverse populations, has evaluated community-based programs, and has authored books and articles on children’s behavioral health. Recent publications include Children of Color: Psychological Interventions With Culturally Diverse Youth, Transforming Mental Health Care for Children and Their Families, The Influence of Race and Ethnicity on Psychiatric Diagnoses and Clinical Characteristics of Children and Adolescents in Children’s Service, and Co-Occurring Disorders of Adolescents in Primary Care: Closing the Gaps.

In 2003 Dr. Huang served as an appointed Commissioner on the President’s New Freedom Commission on Mental Health. She was a member of the Carter Center Mental Health Board; the American Psychological Association (APA) Committee on Children, Youth and Families; the Advisory Committee for the APA Minority Fellowship Program; and a founding board member of the National Asian American/Pacific Islander Mental Health Association and the National Alliance of Multi-Ethnic Behavioral Health Associations.

Dr. Huang recently received the following honors: Distinguished Contributions to Psychology in the Public Interest, APA, 2007; Dr. James Jones Lifetime Achievement Award, APA, 2007; Outstanding Psychologist of the Year, National Alliance of the Mentally Ill, 2005; Presidential Citation, APA, 2004; Distinguished Contributions Award, Asian American Psychological Association, 2004; Champion for Children’s Mental Health Needs, Federation of Families for Children’s Mental Health, 2003; and the AOA Presidential Citation, 2011. She received her doctorate from Yale University.
Ms. Kade is Director of the Office of Financial Resources and SAMHSA Chief Financial Officer, HHS. She directs an office of over 70 staff members, including budget formulation and execution functions, planning and performance analysis, grants management and peer review, and contracts management. Ms. Kade has been Director of the Office of Policy, Planning and Innovation at SAMHSA for the past 10 years and has been responsible for financial management, planning and performance management, and policy coordination. From 1992 to 1998 she served as Director, Division of Financial Management, in SAMHSA’s Office of Program Services. In 1998 she transferred to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), where she served as Chief of the Planning and Budget Operations Branch in the Division of Planning, Budget and Analysis. At the NRC, Ms. Kade was responsible for the development of the annual strategic 5-year plan, the performance plan, and other Government Performance and Results Act activities, as well as the planning process for the annual planning, budget, and performance management cycle for the agency.

Prior to coming to SAMHSA, she worked for the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP), where she served as the budget and legislative analyst responsible for drug treatment and prevention programs. Before working at the ONDCP, Ms. Kade was a program analyst for the Office of Planning, Budget and Evaluation at the U.S. Department of Education.

After receiving a master’s degree in public affairs from the University of Minnesota in 1975 and a master’s degree in criminal justice from the State University at Albany in 1976, she spent the next 10 years working for the New York State Assembly Ways and Means Committee. From 1984 to 1987 Ms. Kade served as Deputy Budget Director for the Committee.

Director Harding is recognized as one of the Nation’s leading experts in the field of alcohol and drug policy. The Center for Substance Abuse Prevention provides national leadership in the federal effort to prevent alcohol, tobacco, and drug problems. As part of an Executive Leadership Exchange within SAMHSA, she recently served as Director of SAMHSA’s Center for Mental Health Services (CMHS) from July 2010-January 2011. CMHS leads federal efforts to treat mental illnesses by promoting mental health and by preventing the development or worsening of mental illness when possible.

Director Harding also serves as the lead for SAMHSA’s Strategic Initiative on the Prevention of Substance Abuse and Mental Illness, which helps create prevention-prepared communities where individuals, families, schools, faith-based organizations, workplaces, and communities take action to promote emotional health and reduce the likelihood of mental illness, substance abuse (including tobacco), and suicide.

Prior to federal service, she served as Associate Commissioner of the Division of Prevention and Recovery at the New York State Office of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse Services, where she was responsible for the development of policy and guidelines for alcohol and drug abuse and gambling prevention, treatment, and recovery programming.

Director Harding has held numerous national positions and has received recognition from her peers for her work, including serving as President of the National Prevention Network, an organization representing the alcohol and other drug abuse prevention offices in all 50 states, and as New York State’s representative to the Board of Directors for the National Association of State Alcohol and Drug Abuse Directors. In 2004 she became the first nonresearcher to receive the prestigious Science to Practice Award from the International Society for Prevention Research.
Mr. del Vecchio is Acting Director of SAMHSA’s Center for Mental Health Services (CMHS). SAMHSA is the lead federal agency designed to reduce the impact of substance abuse and mental illness on America’s communities.

Previously, he was the CMHS Associate Director for Consumer Affairs. In this capacity, he managed SAMHSA’s precedent-setting activities in addressing consumer participation and education, issues of discrimination and stigma, consumer rights, wellness, recovery, trauma, and other issues.

Mr. del Vecchio was the first Consumer Affairs Specialist hired in 1995 by SAMHSA. He promoted consumer participation in all aspects of the Center’s policies and operations, ranging from public education to developing evidence-based practices to address the needs of persons with mental illnesses. Those efforts included initiating historic dialogs between consumers/peers and practitioners, regional peer meetings, social inclusion efforts, training programs, and grant development.

Prior to joining SAMHSA, Mr. del Vecchio worked for the Philadelphia Office of Mental Health in the areas of policy formulation and the planning of a comprehensive system of community-based mental health services addressing homelessness, HIV/AIDS, and many other issues.

He is a self-identified mental health consumer, trauma survivor, and person in recovery from addictions and has been involved for over 40 years in behavioral health as a consumer, family member, provider, advocate, and policymaker. Mr. del Vecchio graduated summa cum laude with a master’s degree in social work from Temple University, has published widely, and is a highly sought after national and international speaker. He has been a leader in many federal efforts, including the Mental Health Statistics Improvement Project Ad-Hoc Advisory Committee, the Federal Advisory Planning Board for the Surgeon General’s Report on Mental Health, the HHS Multiple Chronic Conditions and Community Living Initiatives, and numerous others.
Dr. H. Westley Clark is Director of the Center for Behavioral Health Statistics and Quality at the Substance Abuse and Mental Services Administration (SAMHSA) in the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. His areas of expertise include substance abuse treatment, methadone maintenance, pain management, dual diagnosis, psychopharmacology, anger management, and medical and legal issues. Dr. Clark is also a noted author, clinician, teacher, and spokesperson in the fields of addiction and forensic psychiatry. He has received numerous awards for his contributions to the field of substance abuse treatment, including the 2008 Presidential Rank Award of Distinguished Executive in the Senior Executive Service in recognition of his personal commitment to excellence in government and public service. In 2003 Dr. Clark was honored with the Presidential Rank Award of Meritorious Executive for his sustained superior accomplishments in the management of programs of the U.S. Government and for his noteworthy achievement of quality and efficiency in public service. He also received the 2008 John P. McGovern MD Award from the American Society of Addiction Medicine for his contributions to the increased understanding of the relationship between addiction and society. Dr. Clark received his medical degree from the University of Michigan and his law degree from Harvard University Law School. He is board-certified by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology in psychiatry and holds subspecialty certifications in addiction psychiatry. Dr. Clark is licensed to practice medicine in the States of California, Maryland, Massachusetts, and Michigan and the District of Columbia. He is also a member of the District of Columbia Bar Association.
Ms. Beadle is SAMHSA’s Deputy Administrator for Operations, HHS. In this capacity, she provides leadership and coordination for the Office of Financial Resources; the Office of Management, Technology and Operations; and the Office of Communications. These offices provide leadership and manage SAMHSA’s budget, grants, contracts, performance analyses, administrative management services, human resources for civilian and Commissioned Corps personnel, information technology, communications, and related responsibilities.

Prior to coming to SAMHSA, Ms. Beadle served as Deputy Director of the Office of Minority Health (OMH), within the Office of the Secretary, HHS. In this capacity she was the principal advisor to the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Minority Health in planning, developing, and implementing policies, programs, and activities to achieve the Secretary’s goals for improving the health of racial and ethnic minorities, eliminating health disparities, and improving coordination of HHS efforts related to minority health. Ms. Beadle was also responsible for strategic planning, evaluation efforts, congressional and White House initiative reports, and overseeing the OMH budget, operations, and programs. She led the development of the National Partnership for Action (NPA), a community-inspired effort that led to the development of the National Stakeholder Strategy for Achieving Health Equity.

Ms. Beadle also served as Senior Policy Specialist in the Office of the Executive Secretariat, Immediate Office of the Secretary, HHS. She ensured that policy determinations and communications related to the work of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, Indian Health Service, Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality, and SAMHSA supported the Secretary’s priorities. Ms. Beadle also served as Leader for the Prevention and Health Services Team, with comparable responsibilities for the Administration on Aging, Administration for Children and Families, Health Resources and Services Administration, nine staff divisions within the Office of the Secretary, and activities related to congressional reports, the HHS budget, and regulations.

She has extensive federal grants experience, overseeing development, implementation, and management of grant programs, and has served in other notable positions during her federal and state public health career, including the areas of bone marrow donation, emergency medical services, and trauma care systems. Ms. Beadle’s focus on children and racial and ethnic minorities was shaped by her first civil service position as a Child Care Worker for a state psychiatric hospital for children and adolescents.

She emigrated from Cuba at a young age and holds a master of public administration degree from Western Michigan University and a bachelor of science degree in management systems from the College of Technology at Andrews University.
Ms. Amatetti is a Senior Public Health Analyst for SAMHSA’s Center for Substance Abuse Treatment (CSAT) and the SAMHSA Women’s Issues Coordinator. She is responsible for ensuring that women and family issues are coordinated throughout SAMHSA and with other federal agencies. Ms. Amatetti also manages an interagency agreement with the Administration on Children, Youth, and Families to advance cross-system coordination, which in part involves developing and managing a National Center on Substance Abuse and Child Welfare. She manages the agency initiative on drug-endangered children and a grant program to address the needs of children whose parents participate in Family Drug Treatment Courts. Ms. Amatetti also serves as CSAT Coordinator for the State Women Services Coordinators, the SAMHSA National Conference on Behavioral Health for Women and Girls, and the Women’s Addiction Service Leadership Institute (WASLI). She has a B.A. degree from Georgetown University and an M.P.H. degree from the University of California, Berkeley.
Mr. Altman is SAMHSA Legislative Director. In this capacity, he serves as SAMHSA’s chief liaison with the U.S. Congress and works closely with constituency organizations to advance the Nation’s behavioral health services. Mr. Altman also leads SAMHSA’s Sexual and Gender Minority Interest Group.

Prior to joining SAMHSA, he was a senior government relations manager in Drinker Biddle & Reath’s Government Relations and Regulatory Affairs Practice Group. Mr. Altman represented a broad range of health care clients, including medical device corporations, professional associations, hospitals, community-based providers, public health advocacy organizations, and social science research entities. He provided clients with strategic counsel on a variety of policy and advocacy issues.

Before joining DBR, Mr. Altman was Director of Public Policy at the Suicide Prevention Action Network USA (SPAN USA), a division of the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention (AFSP), where he directed public policy initiatives, initiated and maintained relationships with other national organizations, coalitions, and federal elected and appointed officials, and provided advocacy training. He also served as the Acting Chief Operating Officer of SPAN USA, providing strategic guidance and operational management during the organization’s transition from an independent nonprofit to a division of AFSP.

Prior to joining SPAN USA, Mr. Altman served as legislative representative for the American Counseling Association, where he advocated on behalf of licensed professional counselors on Capitol Hill and with the administration, and handled issues such as Medicare reimbursement and independent practice authority in TRICARE. He also served as a judicial law clerk for the Honorable Claire V. Eagan, Chief Judge for the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Oklahoma, and as political action committee manager for the American Forest and Paper Association.

Mr. Altman graduated cum laude from Duke University with a B.A. degree in public policy studies and received his J.D. degree from the Georgetown University Law Center.
